While Intermediate level and above exercises may be introduced, modifications are always provided to make this class fit all ages abilities and levels. Although Pilates equipment is not utilized during mat classes, small exercise props such as Magic Circles, weights, bands and balls are often utilized to engage specific muscle groups and assist with body positioning.

Often described as meditation in motion, Tai Chi promotes structural strength, balance, coordination, flexibility and mindfulness. These non-aerobic, low impact, flowing movements are energizing, enjoyable and challenging. An impressive growing body of research is verifying the many health benefits of Tai Chi.

Wall Yin

Wall Yin is a practice of yielding, thru breath and quieting of the body. Enjoy several poses using the wall to stretch the legs and hips, allowing gravity to slowly draw you deeper. Shoulder mobility movements are also introduced along with use of props. The wall can make Yin even more accessible for people with a variety of mobility ranges. Very calming and sweet.
